HANDWOVEN DENIM

THE JOURNEY OF...

Seven Senses Handwoven Fabrics.

Selvedge denim fabrics are an interpretation of the historic and traditional heritage of India -of hand-spinning, hand-dyeing and hand-weaving, made in the indigenous way of Khadi.

Every Seven Senses fabric is handmade, unique for human touch, simplicity and delicate detailing.

A journey which keeps old crafts alive in a social and environmentally friendly way.

THE HERITAGE OF KHADI

In 1918, khadi was re-introduced in India as a social & financial empowerment movement to support craftsmanship and the people living in the more remote areas of India. Villagers started to plant & harvest their own raw materials, while spinning and weaving was elevated to an ideology for self-reliance and self-governance.

Khadi symbolized the need and importance of indigenous manufactured goods, "Every village shall plant and harvest its own raw-materials for yarn, every woman and man shall engage in spinning and every village shall weave whatever is needed for its own use."

Gandhi.

Since original khadi is made by hands or hand run machines only, the fuel of this craftsmanship is true human artistry.

Khadi became not only a symbol of revolution and resistance but also the face of an Indian identity, and marked the start of a democracy.
